Galaxy Classification & Evolution Laboratory Lab 12 3 (b) Elliptical Galaxies Ellipticals are galaxies whose images have elliptical outlines, without spiral arms, and often appear rather smooth and featureless. Ellipticals vary in shape from spherical to flat, lens-shaped formations.

Galaxy Classification and Evolution

Galaxy Classification. Galaxies show a vast range of forms, and faced with any such situation we would like to seek any underlying patterns. This allows a compact description of individual objects, and if we are fortunate will lead to physical understanding (the prototype system of this kind is the MK stellar classification).

and develop a galaxy classification scheme. Students then compare and contrast their classification scheme with that developed by Edwin Hubble. By completing this activity, the learner will: recognize that galaxies are collections of billions of stars.

CERES: Galaxy Classification Activity

As one of the first steps towards a coherent theory of galaxy evolution, the American astronomer Edwin Hubble, developed a classification scheme of galaxies in 1926. Although this scheme, also known as the Hubble tuning fork diagram, is now considered somewhat too simple, the basic ideas still hold.
